

County Bankers Group Guests of Ray S. Brown Here Saturday

Over forty bankers and guests have dinner in American House — Masonic Quartet of Elmira entertains group — Host gives brief history of local banking institution.

Ray S. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Addison, was host to members of the Steuben County Bankers Association Saturday. Dinner was served in the grill room of the American House to about 45 guests. Entertainment was given by the Masonic quartet of Elmira and Otis Leonard, reader of Elmira.

Officers of the association present were Oliver Whiting, president, of the Steuben Trust Company, Hornell; Richard Biddle, vice president, cashier of the Atlanta Bank; and John Stinson, secretary and treasurer, assistant cashier of Bath National Bank. Officers and directors of the banks represented were introduced to the group. Other invited guests present were Justice Edwin C. Smith of Addison and Robert Brown, manager of the Hornell branch, Arthur B. Treman Co. of New York City.

In his talk of welcome to the group Mr. Brown remarked he had just completed 28 years service with the First National Bank. "I want you to know," he said, "this little bank is now 33 years old. It was started in 1856 as a partnership and in all these 33 years there have been three presidents at the head of this bank. There have been lots of changes during that time and going over the books one can find some interesting things. Most noteworthy is the difference in methods today. When the Addison bank started its life it extended as far as Caledonia and the Goodyear Lumber Company, big mill operators did their banking business here. Yet the largest total deposits ever recorded up to 1899 were $250,000. When I came here I expected to remain only two years, but now I hope to stay as long as I live.

I have had opportunities to go to other fields, but I rejected them. I was born in these hills and when I go out among them as I love to do in this beautiful autumn season, I thank the Great Architect of the Universe that I am not on Ellis Isle. I defy the officer of any bank to find a more loyal group of directors than those who are on the board of the First National Bank. I have made mistakes, but I have never been condemned by the board for my mistakes. Instead they would slap me on the back when there was a loss and say, 'Go to it and make money to get it back'. Smith Stafford Dies at 81

The many friends in this vicinity learned with regret of the death of Smith Stafford, a former resident of this community which occurred in Erwins Thursday afternoon, October 5, 1939. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Leo Miller. Despite his 81 years, he was in excellent health until the week of his death. Monday he was stricken and failed to rally.

Mr. Stafford was born in the town of Woodhull on September 20, 1858, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stafford.

His early education was received in the schools of that community. After leaving school he engaged in farming, an occupation he followed throughout most of his life. He married Catherine Fenton in Borden and she died in 1921. Since that time he has made his home with his daughter.

While Mrs. Miller lived in Addison he assisted her in the conducting of the Sprague Mills until her marriage to Mr. Miller when father and daughter assisted Mr. Miller in the operation of Valley Vu Farm and Inn at Erwins.

Mr. Stafford was an ardent member of the Methodist Church in this village.

D. L. Merrill, Corning, assisted by John Sanford and Stacy Newman made the installation. Improvements were made in the projection booth also to take advantage of the new sound equipment.

Voters Must Sign In Person

To comply with Attorney General John J. Bennett's recent ruling that all voters must sign election registers personally, the Steuben County Board of Elections this year will send each district a personal register in addition to books for inspectors.

In past years it has been the custom in small communities for election inspectors to check off the names of voters but under the Attorney General's ruling voters must now sign their names, thus bringing about personal registration. In communities over 5,000 population, voters have signed in past years and will continue to do so. Prayers to Virgin In Triduum in St. Catherine's

Conservation Officer Reed Tells Ad Club of Natural Wonders

Gives interesting talk on various phases of deer, fish and bird life — Shows specimens and photographs — Club to cooperate in business promotion plan — Dinner in Baptist Church.

Addison Merchants and members of the Advertising Club of Addison will meet to determine whether a plan to promote business in this vicinity during the Christmas days will be worked out. A joint meeting of business men and Ad Club committeemen will be held and committees from each group work out details of a proposed gift plan. President Milton Crane appointed John Davis Harry Mullen and Carl Rouse as members of the Club committee.

The speaker of the day at Wednesday's luncheon meeting in the Baptist Church parlors was Ray S. Reed, conservation inspector for this district. He was presented by the Rev. John V. Axtell.

Bowl of Rice Party

A short talk on the proposed Bowl of Rice party for the relief of food shortage and for medical aid for stricken China was given by Harry Mullen, who is co-chairman with the Rev. Axtell of the local committee.

Deer

Inspector Reed stated he would show a collection of game and various photos and explain them. He said in part: "All deer are spotted at birth as you can see from this hide. These spots are put there by nature to blend with backgrounds and protect the baby deer. Deer lose the spots during July or August. Deer shed their horns every year. A horn is set into the skull about half an inch. In December and January the horn sinks away from the skull and falls out. When the fallen horn is exposed to the weather it softens and is eaten by porcupines and other like animals. New horns come in April or May and are velvety. They become polished during August and September. Deer are scrappy during the mating season. When a buck is without horns it is bashful and retiring. Most of its fighting is done with horns. Points do not indicate the age of a deer and telling the age of a deer is guesswork on anyone's part unless he brought it up from infancy. "Contrary to belief of some farmers the state will not pay for damage done by deer. Permits are issued for killing deer doing damage damage they do is little in most cases.

Hunting

"Property owners in 12 towns interviewed in this district have removed posting signs to permit hunting. Only two stated they would but so far only 17 deer have been killed for over 60 permits issued in this vicinity. Farmers claim the not permit hunting, fishing or trapping under any conditions and two stated they would permit hunting for 25 per each person per day. Others will permit hunting if hunters ask permission. A license does not give a hunter a right to hunt on any land without permission, whether the land is posted or not.

Posting

"Sign requirements are 11 inches square, name and address of owner must be on sign, printing matter must occupy 80 square inches exclusive of name and address and every corner end and side must be posted not to exceed 40 rods apart. If only one is wrong it voids the whole posting.

Fish

"Relative to fish. The Bath state fish hatchery is ideal for trout for they raise more pounds for less money than any hatchery in the state. Fish there are four times the size of those grown in natural surroundings. The State Department is interested in putting full sized legal fish in streams and lakes rather than fingerlings or fry. They have found that 90 per cent of fingerlings and fry are eaten while only 15 per cent of legal fish are destroyed. Brown trout are the only ones which can survive in Steuben County streams."

Mr. Reed answered several questions relative to fish, pollution, deer hunting and other conservation problems for one of the most interesting sessions of the club. He showed horns, fish and other specimens and many photographs.

Opening prayer was given by the Rev. Mondula C. Johns and the closing by Rev. Axtell.

TUSCARORA CREEK FLOWS AGAIN

Last summer we experienced the driest season we have ever known in this locality. Along in July Tuscarora Creek ceased to flow, and as the drouth continued the stream-bed became a weed-choked mass of dry stones. September rains finally came to break the drouth, yet the creek failed to respond to the rains and nothing but stagnant pools revealed whatever water was seen there. Even the "linestorms" failed to start water dancing down the old stream-bed, and villagers who watched from day to day to see if the Tuscarora would spring to life were as often disappointed by its continued dry barrenness.

Then on Sunday another hard rain of several hours duration changed the picture. Early in the afternoon a little rivulet began trickling over the stones—the first show of living water in about three months. The rivulet, quickened and swelled until it became a brook which flowed lustily around the bend by mid-afternoon.

The re-awakened stream is a final signal that the long parched earth which became dry as dust for several feet down, has become filled with water. So again there is grass in the pastures, water in the wells and springs, and Tuscarora Creek sings happily on its way to the ocean. The drouth is over at last and in spite of the discomfort and loss it occasioned the murmur of running water re-awakens our faith in a new and better season coming.

THE PAI-MUTUEL AMENDMENT

Voters this election will be called upon to vote for or against only one state constitutional amendment. Yet this amendment should be considered carefully by every voter, especially by men and women who can be stirred by moral convictions, for the amendment would legalize pari-mutuel gambling at race tracks in this state.

The bait hung out to the voters to catch their vote for this sanction of law to race track gambling, is the bait of tax revenue. The amendment provides for a tax upon race track betting, thus did the framers try to convince the public that it would be getting something for nothing, but anyone with a sense of proportion knows that legalizing vice of any sort for the purposes of revenue only undermines the morals of our people. In so far as the amendment would entice poor people to throw their money into race track gambling, just so far would it take bread from the mouths of women and children and add to our relief burden. Actually the revenue derived would never equal the government costs the change would bring about.

The amendment was slipped through the legislature last spring in the closing hours by legislators from the metropolitan district, and it is from that quarter there comes the public urging for its ratification. The question was thoroughly threshed out last year in the Constitutional Convention and the delegates decided it should be presented to the people for vote. Assemblyman Stuart some time ago publicly denounced this proposed amendment and urged the people of Steuben County to vote against it.

Whether or not this amendment is passed or killed depends largely upon the decent people in up-state New York. New York newspapers frankly state their belief they could get enough votes in the city to pass this if it were a general election year. But they fear public sentiment in rural New York will kill the amendment. It is to be hoped rural voters do not go to sleep on this issue.

HE IS AN AMERICAN

(From the New York Sun)

He is an American.

He hears an airplane overhead, and if he looks up at all does so in curiosity, neither in fear nor in the hope of seeing a protector.

His wife goes marketing, and her purchases are limited by her needs, her tastes, her budget, but not by decree.

He comes home of an evening through streets which are well lighted, not dimly in blue.

He reads his newspaper and knows that what it says is not concocted by a bureau, but an honest, untrammelled effort to present the truth.

He has never had a gas mask on.

He has never been in a bombproof shelter.

His military training, an R. O. T. C. course in college, he took because it excused him from the gym course, and it was not compulsory.

He belongs to such fraternal organizations and clubs as he wishes.

He adheres to a political party to the extent that he desires—the dominant one, if that be his choice, but with the distinct reservation that he may criticize any of its policies with all the vigor that to him seems proper—any other as his convictions dictate, even, if it be his decision, one which holds that the theory of government of the country is wrong and should be scrapped.

He does not believe, if his party is out of power, that the only way in which it can come into power is through a bloody revolution.

He converses with friends, even with chance acquaintances, expressing freely his opinion on any subject, without fear.

He does not expect his mail to be opened between posting and receipt, nor his telephone to be tapped.

He changes his place of dwelling, and does not report so doing to the police.

He has not registered with the police.

He carries an identification card only in case he should be the victim of a traffic accident.

He thinks of his neighbors across international borders—of those to the north as though they were across a state line, rather than as foreigners—of those to the south more as strangers since they speak a language different from his, and with the knowledge that there are now matters of difference between his government and theirs, but of neither with an expectancy of war.

He worships GOD in the fashion of his choice.

His children are with him in his home, neither removed to a place of greater safety, if young, nor, if older, ordered ready to serve the state with sacrifice of limb or life.

He has his problems, his troubles, his uncertainties, but all others are not overshadowed by the imminence of battle and sudden death.

He should struggle to preserve his Americanism with its priceless privileges.

He is a fortunate man.

He is an American.

ANOTHER WALLOP THAT BOUNCED

If our readers can take their minds off the situation between the Moselle and the Rhine for just a moment, they may find that something worthy of attention is going on in the Oriental theatre again. It looks as if a major Japanese offensive in China—the first in nearly a year—has been thrown into reverse. It is much too early to say that the Chinese have demonstrated their ability to throw a heavy Japanese drive for a loss. Up to date the Japanese have not gained their objectives; but they have gained ground, and the Chinese have lost some. Yet it does appear that in a frontal attack on Chinese positions the Japanese are incapable of gaining ground without sacrifices that are scarcely worth while and that the Chinese are capable not only of stopping better equipped Japanese units in formal combat but of throwing them back in some disorder.

This is more than any observer expected the Chinese to attempt. It has been assumed that whenever the Japanese tried the hammer-and-tongs sort of warfare that won them Hankow last October the Chinese would make a strategic retreat but relieve Japanese pressure on that particular front by attacking at half a dozen other remote points and by whooping up guerrilla interference with Japanese communications elsewhere. Instead, China has just made efficient positional resistance.

Since the Japanese Army, under new management in Tokio, lately undertook to go on with the war instead of bedeviling Occidentals in the treaty ports, all its publicity indicated that its armies in central China were bent upon the capture of Changsha in Hunan Province, and the occupation and control of the Hankow-Changsha-Canton railroad. The plan was presumably to focus four converging columns upon Changsha: one from Canton, which the Chinese successfully diverted from its job by operations in Hongkong's outskirts; one from Hankow along the railway, with support from a naval mosquito fleet in the Tungting Lake; one due westward from Nanchang, in Kiangsi Province; and a fourth southwestward on mountain roads from west Kiangsi, where no trail would carry more than a single file movement, in a widely scattered infiltration.

It appears that the infiltration took a licking. The movement westward from Nanchang ran into a bog. The Canton division turned their backs on the situation to take care of their own communications with the sea. And the only force that kept going was that which moved down from the Yangtze along the Tungting Lake with the help of the mosquito fleet. Atrocious as Chinese gunnery is, it seems to hold its own against the Japanese Army's fireworks until the Japanese naval marksmen come along and prove that, while their shooting is internationally rated as something to weep over, it is better than China's. At any rate, the joint Japanese Army-Navy drive on Changsha was making notable headway until the other drives either bogged down or forgot to arrive, and the Chinese concentrated on stopping it. Stopped it certainly must be, when the Japanese Army's spokesman in Shanghai says that Japan may not take Changsha because that town is not strategically worth a serious effort.

This is nonsense. If Japan cannot take Changsha, she cannot open rail communications between Canton and the Yangtze Valley. If she cannot open and control this railway, she cannot seriously jeopardize the mineral and food resources and the highway communications to the westward that are essential to "free China." It would be rash to assume that Japan cannot take Changsha; but her effort to take that town has not been a frivolous one. It has been a head-on drive that has bounced back. If it does appear that China's badly equipped forces can meet and stop a Japanese frontal attack in this quarter, there will be no reason to doubt that Japan's armies have reached the geographical limit of their striking power and that the rest of this war will be wholly a war of attrition. It will be one in which Japan's economic staying power will depend upon her ability to exploit occupied territory, while the Chinese will exploit their great native ability in the fields of passive resistance and sabotage.—N. SHE'S AN UDDER CHAMP—Gardaine Beyerly, 19-year-old farmette from Bellflower, Calif., won the American Farm Girl championship at Pomona, Calif., by scoring highest points in milking, churning, hay pitching and corn husking.

LOOKING FORWARD

As horrible and hateful as war is, many New Dealers believe they see a silver lining in it for them. This is particularly true of the New Deal agriculture theorists and experimenters. To them the war seemed an avenue of escape from the devastating results of their own fallacious thinking and foolish acts. In brief, these New Deal lads who have tried to make a guinea pig out of the American farmer rubbed their hands in glee over the prospect that the European war would pull them out of the hole into which they had fallen. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was so jubilant that he could not restrain himself from running to the radio and proclaiming in effect that "we planned it that way."

The first flush of jubilation within the Roosevelt Administration inspired by the belief that the European war would solve our economic and agricultural problems, however, has worn rather thin. The hard and fast rules of economics—which the New Dealers always disregard—have come into play and it becomes apparent that these problems remain with us.

Wheat Prices Still Low
For instance, at this writing the price of wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade is about 85 cents. So badly has the New Deal managed our agricultural economy that in income approximately $12,000,000,000, not even the impact of one month of a European war could raise wheat prices to a decent level. A price of 35 cents at Chicago is at least 10 cents more than it is on the farm and a farm price of 75 cents a bushel for wheat is much less than the "dollar wheat on the farm" which the Democratic propaganda spokesman so glowingly promised last spring.

The price of corn at Chicago at this time hovers around 50 cents a bushel. Such a price is not even sufficient to permit the Federal Government to get out of its commodity loans of the past years with loans of the last several years without loss. The same situation exists in regard to other major agricultural products. Perhaps the European war one of these days will get these prices up but it will be in spite of Henry Wallace's A. A. A. Nevertheless, we will hear the same hokey about how the New Deal's farm program is succeeding!

Before the picture becomes blurred by the false claims of the New Deal propagandists it might be well to take a look backward and see exactly what the New Deal has done to the American farmer. In doing so, let's turn to an objective, non-partisan source to get the facts.

Farmers Lost 12 Billions

Richard A. Stadermann, president of the American Good Government Society, finds that during the "seven lean years" of President Roosevelt the American farmer has lost in income approximately $12,000,000,000, compared with the "seven fat years" before the advent of the Roosevelt New Deal. And heaven knows that several of those so-called "fat years" were none too fat for the farmer. Yet, in spite of that, the farmer fared far better before the Roosevelt Administration than after.

Using figures of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Mr. Stadermann compiled the following table:

Total gross farm income, 1929-1932 inclusive	$73,713,000,000.
Total gross farm income, 1933-1939 inclusive, and taking the maximum possible estimate for 1939	$61,000,000,000.
Total loss to American farmers during 1933-1939, at least	$12,713,000,000.

Average loss to farmers per year since 1933, about $2,000,000,000. This total included over $2,000,000,000 of Government payments to farmers during 1933-1939.

"This is a most astonishing result: over $12,000,000,000 loss to farmers during the last seven years," writes Mr. Stadermann. "Had it not been for payments by the Government to farmers this loss would have been $15,000,000,000 since 1933. While the conditions necessitated some Government aid for farmers, this was obviously at the expense of the general taxpayer."

Results No Testimonial For New Deal

"The interesting point is that, in spite of Government payments larger than ever before, farm income declined. The results do not show up auspiciously for the combination of trade agreements, restriction of production and commodity loans."

"It would seem far better to revise our policies so as to restore the higher farm incomes of the years 1926 to 1932, which included both prosperity and depression and hence a normal average income. If we could restore the 1926 to 1932 farm incomes, the farmer would have more income without asking for Government payments. Farmers are upright, independent citizens who prefer asking no favors of anyone, but they do insist upon their right to supply the American market with American-raised farm products."

Little more need be said in way of comment on Mr. Stadermann's findings. His figures cannot be disputed and they speak for themselves. The loss in income cited by him means approximately $1,800 for each farm family in the land. Looking back over the last seven years, what could you, Mr. Farmer, have done with $1,800 to improve the comfort and happiness of your family?

Eighty Years of A&P History Marked By Anniversary Sale

Celebrating its 80th birthday, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company announced today a special anniversary sale this week in its Addison store and all its stores and super-markets in this area. Particularly attractive prices on all items have been arranged for the celebration period, the company said. Harry Chappelle, local manager is cooperating with the company in this anniversary sale.

Pioneer in modern methods of mass distribution, the A & P has been the leader in developing Twentieth Century techniques for distributing quality food at low prices, from the birth of the organization just before the Civil War, its main objective has been to reduce consumer costs by eliminating unnecessary steps in distribution.

Established in 1859

The A & P chain was established in 1859, when George Huntington Hartford, a tall bearded young man from Maine opened the doors of his first red-fronted store in Vesey St. in New York City. Today the stores are familiar sights throughout the country and play an important part in the daily lives of millions of farmers, producers and consumers. Based on a policy of cutting operating costs and passing the savings on to the consumer, the first store enjoyed an immediate success. At that time tea was selling for $1 per pound, but young Hartford purchased the entire cargo of one ship and cut the price to 30 cents a pound.

Adherence to the policy of economy, developed by the elimination of all in-between costs, stimulated public demand for additional stores which were opened in steadily increasing numbers. In the first ten years Hartford opened ten stores and by 1874 he was operating 25 units. Today that first red-front store of Hartford's has grown into the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, operating thousands of units in 39 states and the District of Columbia.

World War Growth

The A & P, along with other chain stores, experienced its greatest growth in the years immediately following the first World War. During the war years, farmers and manufacturers were encouraged to develop their production to the highest point ever known.

When the war ended, they found their foreign markets gone and the home markets shrunken. As a result, the nation had a high powered mass production machine with no effective means of distributing its products. The chain stores provided the logical solution to this problem. They took the products of farm and factory and distributed them to an ever-widening circle of consumers. The result was not only increased patronage of chain stores, and increased consumption of industrial and agricultural products, but a better living standard at lower cost for the nation's consumers.

The A & P alone pays salaries to 85,600 employees, provides the nation's farmers with what they term "an indispensable market for crops and produce." It contributes to industry by the purchase of more than $500,000,000 worth of merchandise from manufacturers and canners a year. Company records show that housewives purchase nearly a billion dollars worth of groceries annually from its stores at savings of from eight to ten per cent and more.

Coffee Buying

Typical of benefits to consumers stemming from A & P improvements in both production and distribution, are those which have resulted from the company's accomplishments in bettering its own brands of coffee—the largest selling in the world—both in price and quality.

Before national brands of coffee reach the customer at an individually-owned store, the bean passes from the hands of the grower to an agent, through the exporter, importer or broker, roaster and the retailer, each of whom must make a profit on the transaction. A & P coffee, however, changes hands but twice; once when the bean is purchased by buyers of the organization, and again when retailed at the red-fronted stores.

The company is the only retail institution in the world that maintains its own expert buyers in Brazil and Colombia, where purchases of the best available coffees are made direct from the grower. The beans are roasted in the A & P's own roasting plants, which are located so that every one of the more than 10,000 stores in the system is within one day's delivery of some plant. The company was the pioneer in the installation of modern grinders as a feature in all its stores.

Control of coffee all the way from grower to housewife is typical of A & P merchandising operations which tend to cut middlemen's profits to a minimum, or eliminate them entirely.

Our Own Brands

At the same time the company also maintains and operates factories and processing plants of its own for foods other than coffee as another step in improved production and distribution. Last year these plants shipped products totaling nearly 700,000,000 pounds, which were distributed through all members of the system. A & P brands include, among other items: tea, bakery products, macaroni and spaghetti, gelatine, desserts, canned beans, peanut butter, olives, baking powder, vinegar, extracts olive oil, jellies, preserves, salad dressing, candy, evaporated milk, canned salmon and fish.

Taking advantage of every possible manufacturing economy, the A & P is able to place on its shelves its own brand of high quality products which retail at prices pared through economies of production and distribution. These two factors enable A & P brand prices to be lower than those of many manufacturers and processors of foodstuffs, who must meet higher overhead and distribution costs.

War Drives Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney From Home Near Paris to U. S.

Had sought peaceful retirement after long and active business career—Home commandeered by French aviation corps—Return September 7 on overloaded Manhattan—Visit relatives in Addison.

Few American refugees in France, England, Poland and Russia had the experience that came to Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mullaney after war was declared in Europe.

Mr. Mullaney retired from business recently and with Mrs. Mullaney retired to her chateau at Chantilly, 23 miles directly north of Paris on a main line railroad, The Nord.

They were living in peace and enjoying the well earned retirement in one of the beauty spots about Paris. And from time to time could make journeys into Paris for metropolitan life.

Danger Zone

Then came the war! They realized the precariousness of their position immediately. The fact that they were located on a hill near this important Nord railway and the fact that viaducts were located north and south of the village, and which might be targets for enemy bombs in case of war and bombing, near Paris.

This was in the month of August. When war was finally declared they made up their minds to leave France and return to America. The final decision was made on a Friday and the following Tuesday, the French air force moved on the estate and had 500 planes lodged there. The home was turned over to the aviation corps by Mrs. Mullaney and as the family moved out the officers of the corps moved in. A most unusual experience.

Mr. Mullaney stated that the home might have been commandeered and would have been a danger spot anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney and granddaughter, Elizabeth Pratt Mullaney 16, then secured passage on the United States Line Steamship Manhattan.

Trip Home

Just before leaving for France last year, they purchased a new American car. The steam ship authorities permitted them to bring this and all their baggage with them to America.

Mr. Mullaney, through his business connections knew Hugh Robinson, president of the U. S. Lines and also Commodore Randall, captain of the Manhattan and Commodore of the United States Lines. He stated that contrary to some published reports, every courtesy was extended to everyone on board; officers and men worked hard and long and the food was excellent considering the ship carried 400 more than its regulation passenger quota.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney and Miss Mullaney boarded the ship at Havre. A huge American flag had been painted on the side of the vessel and searchlights were constantly played on it at night. No blackouts were attempted. The ship did take a most northerly course across the Atlantic, avoiding the regular shipping lanes.

There were 1600 people aboard, 400 over the number the ship was equipped to carry. Many were refugees who boarded the boat without baggage of any sort and many did not even know where their luggage was, for people were aboard from all the belligerent countries.

Postmaster General James Farley cut short a trip in Europe to take this ship back to America.

There were 85 women and 60 men sleeping on cots in the salon and men's lounge. Many others were bunched several in a room in parts of the ship. The Mullaney's were fortunate in getting a room with two beds and a Pullman bunk overhead and their being no other space in the room, no others were lodged with them.

Incidentally Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney were seasoned ocean travelers and experienced no difficulties on that score. This was the 66th crossing for Mrs. Mullaney and the 12th for Mr. Mullaney.

Visit Here

Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney stopped in Addison for a few days, to visit his former home and friends here and to be a guest of his brother James Mullaney. They will go to Chicago to look after some business interests and will then return to Vermont where they plan to live near Bennington.

Mr. Mullaney stated that there is a great deal of feeling in France and England relative to this war, much more so than in the days of September 1938 when the first hysteria struck Europe. At that time no one felt prepared.

European Attitudes

Today the people of France and England, France especially feel that they are willing to go to war and die to end forever this uncertain feeling and the always impending war. They want to get it over with and want to do it now.

As for their feelings towards America, they hope that America will sell them needed goods, but as for American participation, they do not feel America will enter the war.

From contacts with friends in Germany and some of whom left the country since war started, they learn that most of the German people are starving and on such short rations that revolution is almost imminent. Visitors to Germany are fooled into believing there is plenty of everything by signs in store windows which lists produce meats and other commodities "available in Berlin today." But maybe that particular store has only one item of those listed and each store may have only one item. There is little butter, sugar and other "necessity" materials.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney do not expect to return to France for they feel that the war will not add to the value of their property and they like the security and shelter of America.

Borden to Have Home Bureau

The ladies of Borden community met at the Grange Hall September 27, at 2 p. m. to organize a Home Bureau unit.

Mrs. Mathewson, county executive was present and gave an outline review of the Home Bureau from its beginning up to the present time. It was decided to hold meetings in the Grange Hall the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month.

The following were present: Mrs. Lois D. Mathewson of Bath; Mrs. Harriett Hibbard, Mrs. Bernice Newland, Mrs. Mildred Baker, Mrs. Mildred Herrington, Mrs. Leona McConnell, Mrs. Prudence Dunningburg, Mrs. Stella Langer, Mrs. Chambers, Mrs. Grace Gamet, Mrs. Clara Holt, Mrs. George Hurd and Mrs. Beth McCaslin.

Training For School Boards

By Nikolaus L. Engelhardt
Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University

The manner in which your child will be educated depends largely upon your school board. School boards have the decision in the more important matters of policy, and they have to deal, moreover, with many technical matters of great complexity. Should new members receive training for this job? What is the best way for them to familiarize themselves with the intricate details of the task they have undertaken?

Assume that at the first meeting a newly elected or appointed member attends, the crucial issues presented for decision include the expansion of the curriculum, the character of state financial support, the salary schedules of the professional personnel, or the addition of a new school building to the educational plant. Most laymen who have not delved deeply into professional educational literature, and have not taken opportunity to study such broad educational problems, would find themselves quite at a loss to express competent opinions or to vote with intelligence on such topics. Boards of education are widely recognized as the superior method for representing the people in public education, but plans should be devised to provide school board members with training before as well as during their service in order to assure the public that their representatives are serving public education in the most satisfactory method.

School board members, after a year or more of service, find their public work most attractive. They become enthusiastic about education and frequently develop as its best supporters. Many of them read widely, defend board policies in the press and before the public, and assume distinct leadership in other important ways. They are all, no doubt, interested in the continued improvement of their service. There are various ways to bring this about.

School board associations, both local and state, which devote their programs to professional education topics, as is done by the New York State School Boards Association, have proved to be splendid agencies for the training of members.

It has ever been suggested that new school boards recruits serve for a time before casting a vote. This would provide further opportunity for making contacts and exploring the areas which are of immediate importance in local school board work.

School boards should print periodically a history of school board decisions and policies. Such a history, covering a ten-year period, may well constitute a guide for new school board members as well as for the lay public. It should be comprehensive enough to reveal the underlying principles upon which the community is operating its schools, the attitude that the community is adopting toward the school personnel and student body, and the relationships between community needs and school accomplishments.

Dansville — The largest industry in town now has 647 employees on the payroll.

Wavland — Conrad Weinhart, 75, died here after being in business here for over 57 years.

I'm still filled up with the World's Fair and probably will be for quite some time. All phases of life are depicted from the cave man to the man of the year 5,000 and our own embryonic development is shown in real and real bodies. I'm so filled with the whole thing that instead of confining it to this column, I'm writing a story to be placed on another page of the paper.

However some of the World Fair oddities can be mentioned here. A woman hired a wheel chair to be pushed about the ground. She had gone but a short way when she noticed a different youth pushing her chair. She asked the reason. The second chap told her he was not a college graduate and he was seeing if he could do the work.

Saw light turn corners and make sound, saw cold heat cook pop corn, Jimmy Lynch's hell drivers taking dare devil chances, the rocket ship of the future to take man to Mars, three huge cases of trophies of Major Bowes with about 500 police badges given him by various communities, the hundreds of ship models which would delight Jay Mose and the hundreds of airplane models which would delight Bill Newman and Jim Tobin, saw the exhibit of our own section of the state mutilated and parts removed, saw man made lightning of 10,000,000 volts.

Saw a piano hung by one of its own wires, surprised Mrs. Rambler by being on television for a broadcast, tested our hearing, car control and driving, eyesight and lungs, saw the beautiful panoramic pictures in Eastman exhibit, spun glass and glass blowers in glass building, saw a 50,000 watt electric light bulb, went through a street a block long made up to represent a street of 1882.

We saw railroads of the past and present in a huge pageant, a miniature circus to delight young and old in the Beechnut exhibit, ate candy and fudge made from Junket products in the Foods Building, heard myself talk in the telephone exhibit, was escorted around the British exhibit by the man who escorted the King and Queen through the building, saw Captain Cobbs car, which went 367.74 miles per hour.

In the Swiss pavilion we saw the tiniest watch in the world no larger than an eraser on an ordinary pencil, danced to Eddie Duchin and his orchestra and heard Artie Shaw and also Bob Crosby and their orchestras, saw a man's pocketbook made of panda leather worth $5,000 for it is the only one of its kind in the world, $4,000,000 worth of diamonds laid out in trays and a $600,000 diamond necklace, saw girls frozen in ice, saw a motor car made of milk, eggs fried over a newspaper, popcorn popped with electricity and no heat, cows milked on a merry-go-round, heard many tongues spoken by people about us as we went through the grounds.

Saw the life and times depicted in countries all over the globe in the international exhibits, was impressed with the magnitude and propaganda in the Russian and British exhibits, saw men and women of all ages holding hands as they traveled from exhibit to exhibit, hundreds resting between buildings with their shoes off, saw a watch as thin as a silver dollar, art works worth millions, talked with Dutch bell ringers, almost went fishing in the flowing waters in a wooded stream in the Maine exhibit.

Two girls were on their way to school when they saw a bouquet of flowers in Coral Payne's barber shop window. One said to the other, "I did not know he was dead."

Halloween is on its way judging from the actions of some of the younger generation already. It would be a good idea for some of the younger generation already. It would be a good idea for some adult organization in the village to sponsor a Community Halloween party in the school, old gym or village hall for the kids on that night. It saves money in the long run.

I'm wondering what is to become of the curbing along Valerio parkway. Ice, water and snow will get into the broken parts this winter and next spring there will be no curb there. I called attention to this several months ago.

Some careless motorists are still parking their cars in the driveways leading from the rear of the stores on the west side of Main Street.

American Boy Magazine Companion to Thousands

Hundreds of thousands of boys and young men read THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine every month and consider it more as a living companion than as a magazine.

"It's as much a buddy to me as my neighborhood chum", writes one high school senior. "THE AMERICAN BOY seems to understand a boy's problems and considers them in such a sympathetic and helpful way. It gives advice and entertaining reading on every subject in which a young fellow is interested. It is particularly helpful in sports. I made our school baseball team because of playing tips I read in THE AMERICAN BOY."

Many famous athletes in all sports credit much of their success to helpful suggestions received from sports articles carried in THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine. Virtually every issue offers advice from a famous coach or player. Football, basketball, track, tennis, in fact every major sport is covered in fiction and fact articles.

Teachers, librarians, parents and leaders of boys' clubs also recommend THE AMERICAN BOY enthusiastically. They have found that as a general rule regular readers of THE AMERICAN BOY advance more rapidly and develop more worthwhile characteristics than do boys who do not read it.

Trained writers and artists, famous coaches and athletes, explorers, scientists and men successful in business and industry join with an experienced staff to produce in THE AMERICAN BOY, the sort of reading matter boys like best.

THE AMERICAN BOY sells on most newsstands at 15¢ a copy. Subscription prices are $1.50 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Foreign rates 50¢ a year extra. To subscribe simply send your name, address and remittance direct to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

Little Six Players' Banquet in Addison Marks Season's Close

Players gather in Eagle Hotel Saturday night — Pay tribute to managers and league officers — Harry Mullen of Advertiser speaks on sportsmanship and world conditions—Players respond to toasts.

Off-diamond friendliness marked the first banquet of the Little Six League baseball players held Saturday night in the Eagle Hotel. Playing rivalries were forgotten in the camaraderie of the banquet and speeches. President William Davison of Woodhull presided as toastmaster. There were 35 present.

Harry Mullen, sports editor of the Advertiser congratulated the fellows on their sportsmanship and pointed to the clean playing they enjoyed while youths abroad played with guns and gas masks. He called attention to the lessons of sportsmanship learned in baseball and which might be used in foreign countries to better man's relations with his fellow men. Some incidents in the early history of baseball were given. Mr. Mullen pointed to the fact the Little Six in its early days received impetus from the Advertiser through James Wallace of the staff at that time. He congratulated the fellows on donating their time and money for the love of the game and wished them well for next year.

Ted Smith of Caton paid tribute to the work of the president, Mr. Davison and to secretary-treasurer, Robert Drake. He said in part, "The Little Six has done more for baseball in this vicinity than any other group or individual."

Ralph Wade, business manager of the Addison team gave two baseball stories, spoke humorously of how baseball is played and of fan reactions to umpires. He spoke of the work done in the Little Six for the promotion of baseball and sportsmanship.

Umpires who donated their time during the year were given a rising vote of thanks as were the league's officers. Tom Grace, Caton field manager paid tribute to the players on his team, the League champions and stated it was one of the best teams he had ever worked with in the league. He also asked for words of praise for the managers who had to get players on the field, see that all apparatus was in place and on time and do all sorts of other work.

He continued, "We sponsor our own team and raise our own funds. We enjoy the rivalry of the Little Six League and hope that next year there will be more teams. Players should play as a team and forget the individual type of playing."

The theme song of the evening was "Take me out to the ball game" with Mr. Davison as song leader. Individuals from various teams responded to toasts and experiences and stories of the past season and other stories were related by players present.

This was voted one of the most successful gatherings of players of the season and was a fitting climax to the season just closed.

The Keeley Cup donated by Keeley's Sport Shop of Corning did not arrive in time for presentation to the Caton nine, winners of the League season and will be given to them by President Davison later.

HIGH SCHOOL WINS—

The high school football squad defeated the Old Timers in a hotly contested football game played Tuesday afternoon. VILLAGE HUNTERS WARNED—

Hunters are warned that with the opening of the season Monday it is against the law to hunt within the confines of the village. There is a great deal of game taking refuge in the village. Not only from the legal aspect but from a safety point of view it is well for hunters to beware in the village for children, dogs and other pets roam the hills of the village and may get in the way of a bullet aimed at game, and a life sacrificed to a few game animals or birds can be long regretted.

Avoca Holds Knights Scoreless

Avoca held a fighting Addison team to a scoreless tie at Avoca last Friday afternoon. The game opened with Addison being on the defensive most of the first quarter and Avoca trying desperately to gain the Addison goal line.

The Knights came through in the second period and began offensive football to the extent that they played in Avoca territory the last three quarters most of the game. Two potential touchdowns were in the offing on long passes into the end zone, but went as incomplete forward passes.

The teams will meet in Addison October 27. The lineup for Friday's game: Avoca—Sager, LE; Alderman, LG; Hovey, C; Becker, RG; Wightman, RE; Raymond, Q; Towner, LH; Peck, RH; Wallace, FB.

Addison—Hargrave, LE; Hopper, LG; Root, C; George, RG; A. Dominick, RE; Gladstone, Q; Thomson, LH; L. Dominick, RH; J. Crawford, FB.
